It's available on Kindle, too! Want to know what it feels like to be three meters above the sky? If you live in a big city, it can feel like there are no stars or wind or anything natural around you. But this book is different. It takes place in the middle of forest, and lets you climb right up into the trees. It's about riding your bike along country roads with nothing but cows for miles, then when you get back home there are buses full of people waiting for their turn at the light. If you're someone who's grown up in a city, this book will let you see how nice things are just outside your doorstep. You can be a three meter kid and discover what it's like to live with nothing but the sky and trees and animals and air, and how amazing it feels to be outside. It's written for kids between eight and eleven years old – mostly – but teens might find this book too, well... childish. But if you want to read about being free, being safe, being happy... you'll have to read it yourself. It's easy reading. It's short. You can even read it in bed or take it with you on the bus or train or plane for a little bit of quiet time before you settle down for your real life! "About this title" may belong to another edition of this title.

"Thanks to Josephine for her wonderful work to put everything in one place. I am not aware of anything like this in any language." "The best way to get someone to read a book is to tell them that it has nothing to do with their field or discipline." "It's easy reading. It's short. You can even read it in bed or on the bus or on the train for a little bit of quiet time before you settle down for your real life!"
